We all send our heartfelt condolences to you all. Even though some time has passed, it seems to us that Mickey is still here. He and Joe had a "real thing" going, especially when they talked baseball and that there was nothing like a Nathan's hotdog. We were so happy when he spent Passover with us the year before last and invited him this year, but he was not up to it. When he came here or Joe went there, they just picked up the conversation as if no time had passed. We were also so grateful to your Dad when my Dad was having surgery and recovering in Rehab. Mickey and my mom, Sylvia were a team. He got her to go out and because he knew she had a sweet tooth brought her special candy to keep her going. Our lives were enriched by your Dad (and your Mom). Mickey and Ethel were my parent's first friends at Heritage and they really enjoyed each others company. We will miss Mickey and wish that all the stories and memories will help support you. Much love, All of the Sheinman family

Mickey Mickey was there on Utah Beach. The young may think of a shore on The Great Salt Lake. But it's in France, below a bluff where thousands lie forever. This is where, if you descend the steep boardwalk, you come upon a strand of stones laid out long upon the beach. Back and round stones, tan and gray and rough stones. Stones. All sorts of stones. And people from around the world descend the steps. They pick up a stone, place a stone. Perhaps a few. I took two; both dark and smooth. Well-weathered by decades. Brought them to Mickey in Florida, told him the tale of stones removed, stones replaced, one for Mickey, one for my dad. We didn't speak. His tears told the tale. And did you know that Mickey bowled? Yes, twelve 300 games. Now beat that you Pokemon champs. And cards, counting cards? He cleaned the table at blackjack, an exquisite trope; a now-vanished part of our family background. His care for Ettie reached beyond memory. And when we stayed with them, it was Ettie who gave us family history. They were bound in joy in Florida. We even once had a ride in that big Buick, a gift from James, like the house. (Imagine that a child would care so for his parents!) Everything was right. And then Joanie? lost. And Ettie? lost. But until yesterday, Mickey. The warrior against fascism who remained for so long. We remember him at 96, and what his 96 years mean. He was modest and truthful in what was done. And never spoke about taking that beach. And he never claimed that the Monster was killed on Utah Beach. In memory of Mickey, it is left to us to finish that job. Gene Grabiner
