David Hinchliffe posted:

I always felt that Milt had my back in the work environment. He had a way of offering insights which not only were helpful, but were offered in a manner that could easily be digested. I think, like at least some other highly skilled folks, he didn't need to put himself above you or ever talk down to you or to the high school students we all worked with. To me, he oozed decency and professionalism. Thus, I considered him an unofficial mentor to me. I sometimes called him 'Uncle Milt', an affectionate title in a competitive milieau that could have used a bit more affection

I had the honor of working with Milt at Schreiber High School in Port Washington. His door was always open and he worked tirelessly for the benefit of all the students and staff. He was an outstanding school psychologist and I, as a special education teacher, learned much from him. I know he touched many lives and I know he will be missed.
